Defendant's motion to remand for correction of his presentence investigation report (PSIR) is DENIED.

Defendant contends that the PSIR contains inaccurate information because it lists an incident of domestic violence which was dismissed nolle prosequi, and it therefore, goes beyond merely listing criminal convictions. A PSIR must include the defendant's criminal history, including prior criminal convictions, MCR 6.425(A)(1)(a), and any other information that may aid the court in sentencing, MCL 6.425 (A)(1)(l). Defendant does not contend that the challenged adult history entry is not part of his personal history or was factually erroneous. As such, there is no plain error in the inclusion of the entry in the PSIR. People v Carines, 460 Mich 750, 763; 597 NW2d 130 (1999).
